

Being the best we can be: committed to making a difference
Curious about our diverse world

INTENT

History lessons stimulate children's curiosity about the past in Britain and the wider world. Children grasp the understanding of time, building from events in their own life to a chronological framework of significant events and people. They acquire a vast bank of historical knowledge and are able to make links between time periods. Children develop skills to become engaged historians.

Importantly, learners understand how the past has influenced the present; including our choices, opinions and values. Children appreciate how the past can shape our future and how change can be positive.

Implementation

The humanities are taught on a two week rolling programme by a Specialist Teacher in KS2, across the Federation. A timeline of significant people, periods of history and events is a key image referred to constantly to support children's understanding of chronology.

Historical skills are developed through research and evidence interpretation using artefacts, texts, primary and secondary sources. The ability to use persuasive argument to offer their point of view is actively supported. Findings and opinions are recorded in History Books or confidently communicated in a variety of ways. Knowledge Organisers support children and parents to understand the key knowledge, skills and vocabulary within a theme.

Themed teaching is used to progress children's knowledge and foster skills as a historian - children who can understand and empathise with past events.

Impact

Children obtain a secure knowledge and understanding of people and events from historical periods covered. The impact of this teaching is recorded in thought showers, mind maps or spidergrams at the beginning and end of a topic to capture how the children know more and remember more. They develop an enthusiasm for history and a curiosity about the past and how it can be interpreted in different ways. Children are able to think, discuss and debate about the past. They appreciate and celebrate the diversity of societies and the process of change.
